DECORATION METHODS

DIGITAL PRINTING

This method prints digital-based artwork directly onto various media.

ROTARY DIGITAL PRINTING

This involves printing digital-based artwork directly onto cylindrical products like drinkware.

PAD PRINTING

This method, referred to as 1 colour in the catalogue, uses a silicone pad to transfer an image to a product from a laser etched printing plate.

SCREEN PRINTING

This method, referred to as 1 colour in the catalogue, involves pushing ink through a mesh screen, imprinting a coloured design onto the material's surface.

LASER ENGRAVING

This type of decoration uses a laser beam to mark high-quality text and graphics on various products.

TRANSFER

This entails printing a design on transfer film, which can then be applied to fabrics or other materials using a heat press.

SUBLIMATION

This method enhances polyester and synthetic items with vibrant, enduring colours that resist fading, seamlessly integrating graphics and colours into the fabric.

LABEL

This involves printing logos digitally on rolls, which are then applied on various products.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

The showcased items are examples of personalised techniques and do not suggest provision to owners of specific trademarks. Customised items are exclusively available for purchase by trademark owners.

Variations in colours may occur between shipments. For critical colour requirements, kindly request a sample to accompany your order. While efforts are made to ensure colour accuracy, the colours depicted in these products should serve as a reference only. Actual product colours may differ due to photographic reproduction.

Avoid using stipples and screens on spot, screen, and pad-printed items. Please refer to the artwork for approval before finalising delivery, especially if uncertain. As we continually enhance our range, changes may be implemented without prior notification.
